December 2019

Memoire of the Marching Beings

The last month of 2019 has been eventful for the marchers of the Delhi to Geneva Global Peace Walk. From unexpected rains in chilly winters to receiving overwhelming responses from the youths of different villages, towns and cities. And tis season of Christmas and New Year raised feelings of hope within each of us towards a more inclusive and open world.

With rising young energy levels in the Indian country over the evolving political conditions, we often found ourselves asking our many Gods (that one creator) to show us birds of hope and love. The many youths we got to meet in December 2019 were these birds. The many villagers, tribals, politicians, businessman, fellow marchers etc are all birds showering hope in this world like lightning rods. Inspiring and selfless individuals like Vishnupriya (Orissa, India), Rajagopal (India), Mr. Koyan (Kerala, India), Sonia Deotto (Mexico/Italy), Meenakshi Natarajan (India) and many others who have dedicated their lives to work for the needy are our elder birds showing us the way. The young group of ILC fellows hungry to learn more of ways of bringing peace and justice are lightening rods that will spread like a positive wildfire.

It is truly us individuals the beacons of hope or in contrary words - weapons of hope.

Saraswati Uikey, Raisen, MP, India [Delhi to Geneva Global Peace Walk Marcher]

For many years, I moved around working as a daily wage labour. My life back then as a 14 year old single mother was tough and depressing.

Amidst this journey of exploitations, abuses, struggles and hungry stomach, I happened to attend one of Ekta Parishad's youth training programmes. The purpose of working for the landless, indigenous and the marginalised gave me hope of living a meaningful life. But it took me years to muster strength and believe that a dignified and respectful life is possible, for me too. And this hope finally pushed me to join Ekta Parishad when I was 18 years old, thus commencing my new life.

Saraswati Uikey works in the Raisen district of Madhya Pradesh, India, on the forest, land and water rights of the marginalised communities. Back in 2005 when she first came to this village, as a single mother, Saraswati faced a lot of backlashes, name tagging and spite from the villagers especially the women. But through years of nonviolent dialogues, perseverance, inner strength and love, today the village community is Saraswati and her daughters family. Under her leadership, more than 1000 people have gotten rights over their forest lands.

I come from an indigenous tribal lineage - the Gond tribe. And that I believe has made me more sensitive towards nature and the problems of the marginalised, indigenous and the needy.

ON THE MOVE FOR JUSTICE AND PEACE

It was not difficult for me to decide that I have to walk from Delhi to Geneva. Today everyone wants a change because the way our world is heading, it's only creating more pollution, poverty and exploitation.

I want to walk for my Gond tribe, walk for my Raisen family, I want to walk for myself.

Claire Lhermitte, France [Delhi to Geneva Global Peace Walk Marcher]

Claire Lhermitte, a 21 years old student of History and Geography from Paris Sorbonne University (Paris IV), France. Nature's balance despite its many complexities and the essence of love within all living being inspires her. Jai Jagat to her is a world order where every person, animal, plant and creation lives together with love in harmony and peace. And for Claire one of the important elements for living in peace is communication, deep listen, compassion and goodwill. A true, clear and respectable communication, and to listen, observe and analyse deeply to really understand the words, the needs, the life style and values of the other is key. This Claire believes must exist not just amongst us humans but also with the ecology that we are all a part of.

Sunny Kumar, Bihar, India [Delhi to Geneva Global Peace Walk Marcher]

25 year old, born in a small village of Chadhua, Bihar, Sunny Kumar, was always determined to raise the status of his family through education. He belongs to an economically backward family and the only earning member of his family was his grandmother. But this could never stop Sunny's enthusiasm to get a proper education and he passed his matriculation with 1st Rank in the whole Khurni block.

Sunny wanted to peruse his higher education in engineering for which he came to Bhopal, Madhya Pradesh. Where, Sunny developed a special interest in theatre, poetry and social service. He joined a theatre group called Kaafila, through which he was introduced to ANSH, a social youth development organization from Bhopal. Course of which, he participated in various street plays and nonviolent trainings that were organised across India. He was also a part of a youth initiative called Go RURBAN where he focused to bridge the gap between Rural and Urban spheres. While he was exploring his journey of social changes, he was introduced to the idea of Gandhi and non-violence. Also how it can be used as a tool for the global social change.
